VII. Read the passage carefully and then answer the questions below it

Language, the way we express ourselves, is a vital part of learning. A baby learns his native tongue naturally by hearing speech around him. If the speech he hears is rapid, not clear and never directed at him then he hears slowly and speaks badly. A child of two or three years old who can't make his desires known or put his thought into words will usually become angry. His relationships with others will get worse. If the speech a baby hears around him is clear, and his family talk to him, he will gain a satisfactory command of language directly, by his mother, his language ability will be greater.

By the time he is two, it is quite possible for him to have a vocabulary of two thousand words and by the time he is three, he will be able to read. Onece ahead he will stay ahead.

1. How is language defined by the writer?

2. How does the baby learn his mother tongue?

3. How does the child usually react when he can't express himself?

4. What is the role odd the mother in the education of her child?

5. What are the ideas expressed by the writer on how a child should be taught his native language?
